Jeff has over 3 decades of experience in healthcare and corporate transactional and regulatory matters, including acquisitions and divestitures, federal and state licensure, and compliance. Jeff's clients include health care providers such as hospitals, physician practices, and privately held corporations. He represents clients in transactions involving the provision of professional services to licensed healthcare entities, the formation and transfer of licensed healthcare organizations, and the management of licensed entities by business organizations.

Jeff also advises clients with respect to business planning, growth, succession, and exit strategies; governance, control, and operational issues; and the impact of state and federal legislation, including anti-self-referral, anti-kickback, Medicare and HIPAA.

Jeff was formerly a Board Member of the Association for Corporate Counsel, West Central Florida Chapter, and served as both President and Vice President of that organization. He was also a Board Member of the Association for Quality Imaging, a national lobbying organization based in Washington, D.C., and lobbied Congress on multiple occasions for changes to the Medicare payment laws.

Jeff writes and speaks on various regulatory topics for many of his clients. He is active in community charitable work and school related activities. He and his wife and three children live in Tampa.
